UK Outlook for Saturday 14 Aug 2021 to Monday 23 Aug 2021:
Sunny spells and showers in the far north and cloud and some rain across southwestern areas on Saturday, but elsewhere mainly fine and dry. Showers are likely again across the north and west on Sunday and Monday with some strong winds, but it is expected to be drier in the southeast. Beyond this it is likely to remain changeable; confidence is low in terms of detail, but most places will likely see showers or longer rain spells, interspersed with some drier, more settled periods, these drier periods probably becoming more common toward the end of this period. Strong winds are possible at times, especially in the northwest. Temperatures likely to be around average, perhaps warm in the east and southeast.
